

Once upon a time, there was a greedy tyrant named Bully George, who lost the election of 2000 and 2004. Instead of conceding, he stopped the counting of votes in 2000 and rigged the counts in 2004. Within a year of his becoming dictator, Congress enacted the PATRIOT Act, which took away freedom from the people. Within, two years of his taking office, Congress adopted a war resolution that set the stage for a permanent war with Iraq.

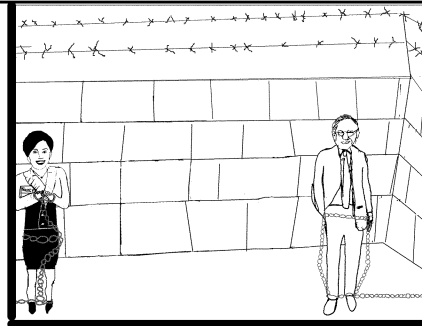

One Democratic leader of Congress led the fight to stop the PATRIOT Act and the war. He was accompanied by other members of the House of Representatives, such as Maxine, Lynn, Cynthia and Ron. When while most Democratic leaders supported the theft of the 2004 election, the courageous Congressman and his friends stood up and said "no." The courageous Democratic leaders who had led the opposition worked to stop the war and restore freedom. His name is Dennis.

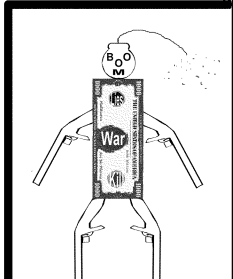

The majority of Democratic leaders deserted the American people. After leading the fight to adopt the PATRIOT Act, John wrote the resolution for war with Iraq and lied to sell it to Congress and the American people. Then he deserted the people who voted for him for vice president in 2004 and went to work for a corporation that stole people's homes through predatory lending.

Meanwhile, the Speaker of the House and the Senate Majority leader were locked up in the basement of the White House and replaced with Bully George's faithful companion and an elephant, both wearing disguises. They worked hard to promote Bully George's agenda. It looked pretty hopeless for the American people.

Barack, pretending to be anti-war, got his opponents to resign and then, for his first act as a Senator, voted to support the theft of the 2004 election. Then he voted over 24 times in support of war and over 5 times in support of renewing the PATRIOT Act.
